Sri Ramanujacharya: A Biography. Sri Ramanuja: Extracts from the Bhashyam of.Association of depressive symptoms with the sleep-wake cycle in a population-based sample. To assess the association between mood and circadian rhythmicity, we examined the correspondence between the circadian rhythm of mood as assessed by questionnaire and as measured by actigraphy in the population-based study of the Health 2000 Survey. The sample comprised 2,689 persons aged from 19 to 96 years. We used questionnaires to assess the weekly mood, the sleep-wake cycle and social activity and the actigraph to monitor the circadian rhythm of activity. The circadian rhythm of activity was extracted from actigraphy as a circadian component (CC) with 12 components. To correct for the effects of age and sex, the cycle of the activity from an older reference group was subtracted from the rhythm of each person. The frequency of persons with depression, as assessed by the Cambridge Depressive Scale (CAM-D), was significantly and positively associated with both the CC of activity and a component that we called magnitude of activity (MAG). We found significant differences between the components of depression and the cycle of activity among those with depression, particularly among women who had depression. In our data, depressive symptoms were more frequently reported when the mood and the circadian rhythm of activity varied widely from day to day and when the circadian rhythm of activity was impaired.Quote I want folks to know what we're talking about when we say "Google." We're not talking about one company -- there are a lot of Google services that we use. That's why we're calling these products "Google" and saying they have hundreds of millions of users. Quote We use that research to help feed into our products and services, like we do with Microsoft research. As we get better at serving more people and more products, we'll continue to look at the information we capture. Quote We use 3da54e8ca3
