Bristol sits between the West Country and the rolling chalk hills of the Cotswolds, and one night hotel is providing refuge in a beautiful setting. The Bristol Banbury Rooms is a 16th century house with heritage building status and a lovely art gallery tucked away in the Square. A great place to enjoy a pint and tuck into a hearty dinner in the evening. Bristol is the second biggest city in the south west of England, and is the youngest city in Britain. It was the dockyard for the Bristol Channel where they built the ships to take the William of Orange to England to claim the throne during the early 18th century. There's something different about the city, it's like a factory floor of a different sort, a manufacturing town built up in the industrial age. If you're in the city there are loads of places to have a drink, with a variety of great beer and wine bars, cocktails and local beers. Hostel Review This was our first overnight stay in a hostel for an extended period, and it was a very comfortable experience. The staff were very friendly and helpful and the location was ideal with a peaceful and secluded garden, and very central to the city. Single Room Review Although the rooms are basic, they are comfortable and staff are friendly and helpful. Single Room Review The dorm room was a bit small to say the least, and we couldn't get the light switch to operate the fan. Single Room Review The grounds looked lovely, as did the front garden. Unfortunately the bath/shower only had a shower head, and we couldn't get the water to run. Meals Review The daily menus are very good value for money and the food is usually tasty, although the service can be slow and the food can be very hit and miss. Meals Review The waiter was very friendly
