A team of government and private emergency responders, as well as the police, the military and the Bureau of Fire Protection were still conducting searches for missing people. Authorities said that the landslide was triggered by heavy rainfall in the area. It was the bodies of five children and seven men, but I couldn't identify them because they were badly buried and their face was covered." "Nature versus humans" The landslide was described by local civil defence chief Joel Radan as "natural and unforeseeable". "At this time, we still need to verify what caused this natural phenomenon," he said. Raban said authorities suspected that the school compound was built on unstable soil. "We want to make sure that the schools there are built on stable soil because we don't want this to happen again in ca3bfb1094
